

A. M. BALDWIN DEAD.

Sentinel Courier: A. M. Baldwin, Mayor of the city of Cooperstown, and one of its highly respected and public spirited citizens for the past twenty years, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia at the Nelson Sanitarium in Fargo, Wednesday morning, February 13, at 4 o'clock.

Mr. Baldwin had suffered for the past six months with inflammatory rheumatism, which kept him constantly confined to his home, but about three weeks ago, he had improved somewhat, and after a trip to Minneapolis, where he had his tonsils removed, he departed for New Mexico, hoping that the warmer and drier climate would be beneficial. On the way to Fargo, he took a turn for the worse, and had to be carried from the train at that city. He decided to take electrical treatments at the Nelson Sanitorium there, and last Friday word was received here that he had contracted pneumonia, and was seriously ill. In his weakened condition he was unable to withstand the ravages of this disease and gradually failed, death claiming him early yesterday morning.

Mr. Baldwin was about 58 years of age and a bachelor. He made his home in this city with his sister, Mrs. M. A. Hartman, and niece Miss Hazel Hartman.

He came to Cooperstown about 20 years ago from Wisconsin, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of law. He has served this district in the legislature, in addition to holding the office of Mayor of the City of Cooperstown. In the legislature he was a conscientious and able representative of the people who elected him and as Mayor, he has been a fearless and painstaking executive, with the best interests of the city as a whole his constant aim.

In the passing of Mr. Baldwin, Cooperstown and Griggs county loses a man who always had the upbuilding of the city and county at heart, and a man whose friends throughout the county are legion. His activities extended over a large area, and he was a leader in all affairs of a public nature tending to the betterment of the community in which he lived. We know of no single person whose passing will be so keenly regretted, and our little city mourns his death with a sorrow deep and sincere.
