

rested them on a charge of importing liquor into the state. As the matter stands now they are under bail to appear for trial at the coming session of the court at Fargo.

The liquor business had been given quite a boost by the influenza and by Justice Robinson's recent pronouncement. However, the fate of these three is liable to serve as a warning to others who may have formed an opinion that the prohibition laws of North Dakota are not meant to be enforced.

Subscribe for the Times.