

Henry Alfson was in town Monday for the first time since his tussle with the flu. Henry had a severe attack and for a time his condition was very critical. However, he feels none the worse for his enforced confinement, but naturally prefers a longer respite before the next attack, if it must come.