

A well planned and successfully executed surprise was perpetrated upon Mr. and Mrs. Henry Asmus at their commodious home out west of town, on Saturday evening, when three sleigh loads of their friends drove out from town to spend an evening with them. The neighbors were also in on the secret and attended in body, making about fifty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Asmus lived up to their reputation as royal entertainers and the uninvited guests were made to feel at home. Progressive whist was the diversion among the older people while dancing to the strains of a victrola amused the younger folks. At midnight a delicious supper was served after which the merrymaking continued until a late hour. Mr. and Mrs. Asmus have a beautiful new house on their farm, with electric lights, hot and cold water, being modern in every respect.
