

Community Programs Assured.

Elliott James of the Federated Community Association was in Hartford last week and completed a contract with the business men to put on the Community programs for this season. More than twenty representative men of the community are behind the proposition and the splendid response of these men to the idea of boosting the sale of season tickets, promises a most successful series of community meetings.

The popular family season tickets admitting the entire family to all the twelve programs will be sold at $6.00, and it has been suggested that each of the guarantors make it a point to sell one or more of these family tickets in advance of the opening program. Single season tickets will sell for $3.00 and the single admissions at the door will probably be 50 cents.

The community programs for the winter promise a better grade of talent than last year, and arrangements have been made for more additional features to the regular program. Agricultural experts have been engaged to spend a day in the community in the interest of some phase of better and improved farming.

It is the purpose of the management to have two of the series come before the holidays in order to have the more favorable weather conditions. Everyone who expects to attend these programs is urged to get a season ticket in advance.
