

The firemen are going to give their annual dancing party on New Years eve and everybody in Binford should buy a ticket from the boys just by way of encouragement. This annual ball is one method they have of getting a little revenue into their treasury. When somebody calls on you to buy a ticket, just think of the many times the boys have answered the fire alarm, spoiled their clothes and lost time to help save yours or some of your neighbor's property, then let your hand slip smoothly into your pants pocket and pull forth one dollar and ten cents in return for which you get a ticket and an invitation to their party. Very simple but very satisfactory performance, don't you think?
