

Gortny, who also drove his car out.

Binford was visited for the first time in its history by an auto thief Tuesday night, when Steve Rorvig's Ford was stolen. Mr. Rorvig had put the car in the shed at the rear of his house at about 7:30, after filling it up with gasoline and oil preparatory to making an early trip into the country next morning. It was then he discovered the loss. He found the doors of the shed wide open and the car gone. It is thought the theft occurred about 8:30, as Mr. Rorvig's son and Henry Hanson both say they saw the car when it was driving from the shed, but that nothing of the matter, thinking Mr. Rorvig himself took the car out. A peculiar thing about the affair is that the thief removed two robes, a coat and a tire from the car and put them in the shed. Mr. Rorvig has notified the proper authorities and a search has already begun for the missing Ford.
