

This section was visited by another heavy rainstorm last Thursday which delayed threshing operations several days. At the Ernest Johnson farm, southwest of town, the wind was so terrific that it blew his big barn down, tearing it to pieces. There were several horses and eighteen men in the barn at the time, but no one was hurt. A new granary was shattered to fragments. Mr. Johnson has already commenced the erection of a new barn 30x100 with hip roof:
