

The second home talent play "The Pride of Virginia," was presented in the Binford opera house last Friday evening to a packed house. As is usual with these plays, it was well received, in fact more appreciated than any that has been produced before. This play was a patriotic story of the time of the Civil war, full of rich comedy and funny situations, which brought constant laughs and much applause. Being a war time play a number of popular war songs were introduced throughout the acts and proved to be good and pleasing features. The specialties between acts were catchy and each number encored. The cast had his and her part well memorized and seem to feel right at home on the stage. They did credit to themselves and to the Dramatic club. The receipts of the show amounted to $110.00, and the dance following brought $28.00. A few of the farmers had purchased tickets for the show but were unable to attend. The supper furnished and sold by the ladies netted $39.65, making a total of about $177.65, which will be turned over to the local Red Cross for supplies.
