

from further service in the navy.

Probably the busiest people in Binford during the past two weeks have been Postmaster Knapp and his efficient assistant. The work of the local postoffice is no small thing in late years especially at Christmas time. It is no longer a place where letters are received and given out but it has a multitude of duties, including a postal savings bank, the sale of thrift stamps, the handling of a great amount of parcel post and a general information bureau about all the works of the government.
