

“Never used to believe this Friday, the thirteenth, dope, but I sure do now,” quoth Mr. Average Resident last Friday morning as he frantically groped about for his slippers and padded down to the furnace which he addressed in a language all his own. The storm interrupted train service on this end of the branch until Monday. Friday’s passenger train reached Jessie but was forced to return to Sanborn until the cuts were opened. The mail and passengers on Friday’s train were brought to Binford Saturday evening, by team.
