

Sutton Reporter; A very unusual circumstance is reported from Dover township. A man living there became sick with flu, and from all indications, passed away. The people who had been assisting in caring for him proceeded to prepare the body for burial and after having laid him out they retired to another room. In a short time a noise was heard, and on going into the room where the supposed corpse lay, what was their consternation to find him standing in the middle of the room. The sick man was delirious, and it required a strong effort to get him back to bed. Since then he has improved slightly and has a chance to recover. Some of the people who witnessed this incident were so overcome that they had to leave the place.
