

We are getting another touch of war times these days, sugar being at a premium and almost impossible to get at any price, the local dealers doing it out in parcels of fifty cents worth to a patron as long as it lasts. Coming as it does right in the canning season it makes the housewives think things which are not fit for publication—even if they are perfect ladies on all other occasions.