

Word has gone forth from the front that the boys don't like to have their girls remind them of the war and its sufferings. They don't like the war widow hats, the military tinge to raiment, nor anything in feminine apparel that has to do with the styles of the last four years.

They like the fluffy ruffles girl! They like the frills in femininity!

The boys don't think a girl should be a reflection of trouble but a dispenser of joy. As a consequence the winter fashions are taking a radical lunge away from the prevailing military modes of the past few years. Even the skirts will be kept short and the silk hose long.

Being always on the job the girls of Binford will quickly and gladly take the tip.
