

Hannaford Enterprise: The proposed rabbit farm to be started in Ball Hill valley by local parties unfortunately turned out to be a mirage. As we mentioned last week, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Swingen went to Fargo to bring a number of the rabbits here. Mr. Richardson returned home Wednesday to complete the necessary preparations for the comfort and convenience of the animals, leaving Mr. Swingen, he informs us, to bring the rabbits the next day. Thursday Mr. Richardson had all the local draymen at the depot ready to transfer the rabbits to their new home in the valley, but Mr. Swingen returned without the rabbits. The failure of this promising industry in Hannaford is a great disappointment to all the people and particularly so to the writer, who had been promised a splendid position as publicity manager for the proposed corporation.
