

Hanaford Enterprise. Wm. G. McAdoo, director general of the railroads in the United States, Secretary of the Treasury and son-in-law of President Wilson, was a Hanaford visitor last Thursday evening. As may be supposed Mr. McAdoo did not call here to consult with our citizens on some weighty problem of state but he was merely in town a few minutes while No. 2 on the Great Northern made its usual stop here, his private car being attached to that train. No one knew of his coming through on that train but he was recognizable as his picture has often appeared in the papers.
