

Some fish, say we. Last Sunda. while boating on Red Willow lake, Leonard Hitterdahl's attention was brought to an object near by, and on closer investigation found a big fish floating near the surface. He hit the fish with an oar and, then with little difficulty, landed it in the boat. It was a pickeral and weighed about 14 pounds. A spoon hook was fastened in its mouth, that evidently being the reason for its floating so near the surface when Mr. Hitterdahl discovered it.
