

Why Not In Binford, Too.

McHenry Tribune: A number of enterprising people of this village are flooding the low land adjacent to the railroad track to the south, just across from the lumber sheds of the Crane-Johnson Co., with a view of making an ice rink for public use. The use of the old well owned by the N. P. railway has been secured by the permission of the railway authorities and the village board allowed the use of the fire engine for pumping purposes. The movement is a good one, and the enjoyment of the little folks in skating near home is sufficient to well award for whatever effort anyone has made in making the ice rink.
