

C. V. Moore left yesterday for Minneapolis, where he will enter a hospital, for surgical treatment, under the care of government surgeons. While in France Mr. Moore became afflicted with an ailment in the head that has since been causing him much trouble. At times he suffers fainting spells and he has practically lost the hearing of one ear. The operation is considered a serious one but he will be under the care of trained specialists in this character of work, so that it is expected that no bad results will follow.
