

NEW HOME FOR PHOTO STUDIO

Photographer Newgard Buys Dahlin Building---Will Make Improvements.

Expanding business has made it necessary for Photographer Newgard to seek larger quarters for his studio. Recently he closed a deal for the Dahlin building and as soon as the weather moderates he will put carpenters to work remodeling.

Mr. Newgard has furnished The Times with a plan for the new studio. The old building has a frontage of 24 feet and is 24 feet long. To this will be added an extension of 16 feet in length and 18 feet wide. The difference in the widths of the new and old parts of the building is to allow for a sky-light. The operating room will be about 18x30, leaving space at the front for reception and dressing rooms. The north half of the old building will be used for a work room and dark room. The entrance is to be built in providing space on each side for display purposes. The exterior of the front of the building will be finished in stucco, adding greatly to the appearance.

Mr. Newgard's present quarters are entirely too cramped. In spite of this handicap the excellence of his work has built for him a reputation that reaches far beyond the confines of this community, and to be able to handle this ever-increasing patronage, it became necessary for him to secure larger and more commodious quarters.

When Mr Newgard has his present plans completed, Rinford can boast of one of the best photo studios in the state—barring none—and needless to say it is a great asset to the town's business institutions.
