

"Buz" Painter, of Cooperstown, visited with numerous friends between trains last Friday. "Buz" recently returned from overseas duty, being in the artillery service. His battery was just ready to swing into line when the armistice was signed. Had the war continued 48 hours longer the greatest artillery fire of the war would have been in progress. According to "Buzz", plans were laid for the most gigantic drive ever attempted—but, he stotes, the Kaiser and his bunch must have been "tipped off" and spoiled the whole show by quitting.
