

Matt Rorvig, in company with Lewis Berg of Coopersown, returned Thursday from Euclid, Minnesota, where they had attended the Palmer Farm sale of milking Shorthorns. Matt says that 56 cattle sold for an average price of $552, and he also tells us that he purchased a fine two-year-old heifer. It is evident that the breeding of milking Shorthorns is becoming more popular in this part of the country as well as in the east, for besides seeing these cattle bring their price, Mr. Rorvig heard Mr. Berg refuse an offer of $2000 for one of his cows, which offer was made by Mr. Dodington, manager of the famous Otis herd of Willoughby, Ohio. Mr. Rorvig expects the heifer he bought to arrive within the next few days.
