

IRWIN NYE FALLS TO

DEATH FROM WINDOW

Irwin Nye, father of Editor Nye, of Cooperstown, fell to his death on the morning of August 2, from the nineteenth floor of a hotel in Chicago. He suffered a fracture of the skull which caused his death a few moments after his body was found lying on the roof of an adjoining building 10 floors below by another guest at the hotel.

I. Semmerman of Brooklyn, N. Y., a guest in another room, saw the pajama-clad body of Mr. Nye hurtle past his window and land on the roof below. He called B. J. Bowman, the manager of the hotel, who summoned the police. Mr. Nye was dead by the time a physician reached his side. According to reports, pillows on the window ledge of Nye's room indicate that he was sleeping on the broad sill and rolled out.

Irwin Nye was a resident of Minneapolis until a year ago. He was a brother of former Mayor Wallace G. Nye and has two sons residing in the city, C. I. Nye and P. O. Nye.

Mr. Nye came to Minneapolis in August, 1920, and with his brother and F. E. Coughlin established The Northsider, a North side neighborhood weekly. He was the editor of the paper until he moved to Janesville, Wisconsin, in May, 1922.

Besides the two sons in Minneapolis he has a son at Cooperstown and another at Hortonville, Wis., and a daughter at Charter Oak, Iowa.
