

his mission to Canada.

Nels Olson, engineer on the Lewis Iverson threshing crew, was called to McVille Monday, on account of the injury of his son. The young fellow fell from a load of bundles onto one of the separator belts in such manner that one of his arm was completely severed from the body, and he sustained other injuries about the head, which proved fatal, the young man dying Tuesday morning.

---