

OLE WALHOOD KILLED IN BINDER ACCIDENT

Peain Budget: Another most shocking accident happened in this locality on Wednesday afternoon, when Ole O. Walhood, pioneer of Bergen township was almost instantly killed in a runaway with a binder while cutting corn on the farm of his son, F.O. Walhood, in Nesheim township.

It appears that Mr. Walhood would come to his son and get him to adjust and regulate his automobile, and this was the case this day, and he thus offered to drive the binder while Oliver adjusted the car. It is supposed he stepped in front of the horses to fix something, when all at once these became scared, running over him with the machine, breaking his neck, breaking both legs, and further mangleing the body, killing him almost instantly. The horses headed for home, and at the appearance of these, the son hastened to the field and found his father dying. His son, George, living close by, was also on the spot in a few minutes but although he looked at them, he passed away without being able to say goodbye.

Deceased was about 63 years old, and leaves his wife, five sons and three daughters to mourn his untimely end.
