

fortune and extend congratulations.

The three-act comedy, "The Hooded Coon," presented by local high school pupils, was put on last Friday evening drawing a fairly good sized crowd. Those taking part were very good in their respective roles, everyone of them acquitting themselves with such success that it would be difficult to pick one more effective than the rest. We won't attempt to describe the humorous and perplexing situations that prevailed throughout the play, enough to say that it was full of comedy, and if you didn't attend the performance you missed some fine entertainment. The specialty numbers which interspersed the acts were also good and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. On account of the rainy weather and bad roads no one came in from the country, and there is some talk of presenting the play again for the benefit of those who were unable to see it. Prof. Hauge directed the cast and much of the success of the undertaking is due to his untiring efforts.
