

For quick action probably O. K. Krogfoss is champion in his class, although when he is taking his daily recreation, which consists of sitting in an easy chair and pulling away at an old pipe, he objects to being disturbed. Since the recent fire, Ole, like the rest of us, is a little nervous, and only those who were eye-witnesses can really appreciate his swift movements when it was discovered that a chair in which he was sitting at Hammer-Thingelstad Co., caught fire from a spark of said pipe. The excelsior cushion blazed up instantly and Ole raised up even quicker when the heat commenced to penetrate. He hasn't been sitting quite so much for the past few days, and we understand that Mrs. Krogfoss is given considerable relief in doing her housework because of the fact that he isn't sitting in the
