

"The best home-folks story ever written," critics said of

Quincy Adams Sawyer

when Charles Felton Pidgin's novel appeared; and they've amended their comment, now that it's been translated into movies, to "the greatest home-folks story screened."

WITH THE GREATEST CAST OF STARS EVER SEEN IN ONE PRODUCTION

BLANCHE SWEET
ELMO LINCOLN
JOHN BOWERS
JUNE ELVIDGE
GALE HENRY

LON CHANEY
LOUISE FAZENDA
BARBARA LA MARR
HANK MANN
VICTOR POTEI

Something About Quincy Adams Sawyer:

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with a special cast.—Finely directed by Clarence Badger and enacted by the best cast in captivity. I'm voting for this in the Photoplay Magazine contest as the most entertaining and well acted picture of the year. It does not follow the book very closely, but personally, I like the picture quite a bit better than the book. There's comedy all the way through. For instance, when Bill Franey and Hank Mann attempt to cross the foot bridge which Lon Chaney had greased did they laugh? I'll say they did. And they enjoyed the fight between Elmo Lincoln and John Bowers: This was excellently done. And one thing more, I'd like to know who's responsible for the sub-titles. They're very clever.—Charles Kriehbaum, Paramount Theatre, Rochester, Ind.

Quincy Adams Sawyer, special cast, (eight reels.) We consider this one of the finest pictures we ever saw. It holds interest throughout and the acting is excellent. The rescue scene in the river above the falls, made them hold their breath. Everyone was talking about how good the picture is as he went out. It's new if you haven't played it, even though it is old. It pleased too. The film broke a few times during the first reel, otherwise it was in good condition.—O. K. Stablein, Star, Alexandria, S. D.

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with a special cast.—Extra good picture. River and fall scenes as good as "Way Down East."—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

to be show at

Lyric Theatre in Binford

Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3

also the first episode of the new serial

"The Way of a Man"