

Everybody welcome.

Henry Miller met with a painful accident, Monday, while attending to his duties on the threshing rig. He was oiling a bearing on the separator and his glove caught in the gears, crushing the fingers very badly. At the same moment the casing broke, which released his hand, and had not this happened it is certain that he would have lost his whole hand and probably the arm.