

parently were successful in defeating the issue, yet we doubt if either burg. will profit from it in the future.

We do not censure anyone for holding the opinion that they had to vote against the bond issue, if they saw it in that light, and failed to get facts necessary to convince them otherwise but we do censure those who, knowing better, still persisted in spreading untrue and misleading facts regarding the issue among the people, in order to further some pet scheme of their own. This we call cheap politics, and repeat, that this will come back against these people in their future work.
