

A case of diphtheria developed at Knute Olson home the early part of the week. Rudolph, the youngest son, became ill. Dr. Trustad, who attended the patient, stated last evening that practically all symptoms of the disease had disappeared.

---