

the mines.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton Pederson arrived here Tuesday from their home in Fairmead, California, and will spend two months visiting with friends north of town. Mr. Pederson says that crops in his part of California are good on irrigated land, but poor on unirrigated areas. While crossing the Great Salt lake by rail on their way east, a bad storm came up when the train was about half way across the lake. The high waves washed out the rails in places and the train was forced to back up and abandon that route and take another, delaying the passengers one day.
