

Binford seems to be situated on what might be termed an Indian trail, for we can see long lines of their rigs passing thru here quite frequently on their way between Ft. Totten and Sisseton, S. D. Tuesday was a great day for red skins, and there must have been at least two hundred of them here during the day. They were on their way to Sisseton, and stopped here to purchase considerable provision. They seem to have the dough and are good customers.