

a good portion of his hand spared.

Mrs. Borden received a message, Friday, stating that her husband, who is a locomotive fireman had been injured, and requesting her to come at once. She departed on the afternoon train for Minneapolis, her home and found Mr. Borden suffering from an injury to his back, he having in some way fallen from the engine. It is thought that the injury will not prove serious, however, and that he may recover in a short time.
