

Morris Greenland, arrived from Esmond on Saturday in order to be present at his wedding on Monday. Mose left Binford some several months ago and when he arrived in Binford his old friends gathered around him like a lot of collectors until it seemed he would be suffocated. He was expected to spend very little time in town upon his arrival, for there was another person who was very anxious to see the far-famed Mose. So while "the bride-groom tarried" no one seemed to slumber or sleep. Everybody was anxious to grasp his hand and ask him what brought him back so unexpectedly, but his only answer was "you fellows all wait and see." Well, we all waited and saw.

... of Carl E. Tallmadge form.