

Ben E. Nelson has tired of trying to secure the services of a cook, and has donned the culinary toggery himself. He says that he can make as good coffee as any woman in the world, and is at present well satisfied with the results of his venture.