

on this happy event.

R. B. Vogen used to play ball. He used to slide bases. He played third base in the "Three I" league for three consecutive seasons. He now runs an elevator, but he can not get away from the fact that was at one time a good base-runner. While on his way to the elevator Tuesday morning, he was siezed by a desire to slide some more. The ice was covered with snow—and the doctor found no serious results other than a few misplaced ambitions.
