The Binford lodge of Odd Fellows were hosts at one of the swellest social functions ever held in this section of the state, on Monday evening, at the opera house. About 125 invitations were sent out and nearly all who received them were present, and to those who failed to attend, all we can say is that they missed the time of their lives. The Odd Fellows have the reputation of being royal entertainers and they sure sustained that reputation in this latter event. Dancing furnished the main entertainment. Excellent music was furnished by the Stai orchestra. Supper was served at the Maurer hotel, at midnight, and it goes without saying that that feature of the evening's event was by no means the smallest.
