A dozen ladies gathered in the sky parlor of the Maurer hotel yesterday afternoon and held an old fashioned quilting bee, etcetera. The Times' society editor was on another story so it fell to the lot of the "devil" to get this one. What we didn't hear isn't worth mentioning—the main topic seemed to be women suffrage. All were agreed on that point but were nonplussed as to how to get their rights—owing to the intervention of their bitter halves. Coffee and cake were served and a general good time was had.
