

gines and cars and waived a hearty salute to the people of our town many of whom they made the acquaintance of during their stay here. They proved to be a jolly bunch of fellows and had more sympathizers when they departed than they had when they arrived. The road is now open up this way and we sincerely hope and trust that the elements will make it more convenient for the people as well as the railroads. A committee should be appointed to make arrangements with the elements with this end in view.
