

Andrew Dablin suffered the loss of one of his horses in a peculiar manner last Saturday. His hired man was going to haul a load of straw from a stack on the field adjoining town on the south, and in driving around the stack the horse dropped over, dead. Not a sign of life was to be seen when the man reached the horse. The loss to Mr. Dablin is considerable as the animal was a valuable one.