

A drunken hobo attempted to steal a locomotive attached to a freight train in the yards at Dazey, while the crew was at dinner. The fellow boarded the engine and threw open the throttle, but before the engine got well under way a brakeman managed to get aboard, shut off the steam and throw the hobo off. No cause for this bold proceeding was given except that the bo wanted to get a quick ride out of town.