

Rev. O. Swenson arrived home last Monday from his visit to Norway. He reports that he had a lovely time, regretting however, that he did not accumulate much superfluous flesh which condition he attributes to the fact that he must have worked too hard. Well, if the reverend gentleman finds enjoyment in strenuous labor his idea of pleasure does not correspond with that of the average editor, but we, of course, can see just how he enjoyed himself.

Mothers with little children need