

at Juanita, where Mr. Sorvik is engaged in the carpenter business. They left for that place Tuesday.

Editor Howard of McHenry, spent a few hours in The Times office last Saturday. Jack is a dandy, good fellow, and all this and all that, but we can't forgive him for calling our press a manure spreader. That's all right, Jack, but wait till we catch you with a bunch of the newspaper gang and tell them how you locked up a form and had to use all the rules and jack knives in the shop as "dutchman" to keep it from pulling. Hold 'er.

News was received here Sunday of the death of Mrs. Paul Amlie, at a hospital in Fargo, death resulting from cancer of the stomach. The remains were brought here Tuesday. The funeral was held yesterday from the Norwegian Lutheran church, Rev. Dybvik of McHenry, officiating. Mrs. Amlie was born in Norway in 1874, making her 38 years of age. She was married in 1896. Besides the husband, seven children are left to mourn her departure. The Times joins in extending sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Courier: Some time ago rumor was current on the streets that Mrs. H. S. Thompson, formerly Miss Florence Shue, was dead. The rumor has now been confirmed by her father, A. E. Shue, who is now in the city. Mrs. Thompson died in Italy on the sixth of February from diphtheria. She leaves besides her husband a little four year old daughter. Mr. Thompson is studying voice culture in Italy and will remain there two years before he returns to this country. Mr. Thompson's friends here regret to hear of this heavy bereavement which has befallen him.
