

was well worth the money.

A party of ladies met at the home of Mrs. Aug. Evers, last Friday evening, and perfected the organization of a literary society. It is to be called the Bin Road-a-Lit circle. The officers elected are: Mrs. W. E. West, president; Mrs. Aug. Evers, vice president; Miss Caroline Hagerberg, secretary; Miss Zella Metcalf, treasurer. The critics are: Miss Mildred Pomeroy, Miss Zella Metcalf and F. G. Lewis. Those mentioned, with Misses Marie Herlick and Laura Krogh are charter members. Although the initiative has been taken by the ladies, that does not mean that they intend to exclude the sterner sex, but, on the contrary, they invite them to become members and attend the meetings regularly. An organization of this character is of untold benefit and its value can hardly be estimated, and those responsible for its inception in Binford are to be commended. Meetings will be held every Friday evening. Tomorrow evening they will meet with Mrs. W. E. West. You are cordially invited to attend and become a member.

Wm. A. Amos is the loser of two valuable horses, and that in itself is bad enough, but the manner in which they met their death, makes it still harder to bear. During the latter part of December four of his horses strayed away from his place, and though he advertised for them, nothing was ever heard of them, until a week ago last Sunday.

Then he was informed that one of them had been found about 24 miles west of his farm. A few days later he received word that the others had been found in a cellar in an old vacant house some 10 miles south of his place. During the storm the horses had taken refuge in the old house and their weight had caused the floor to cave in, precipitating them into the cellar. When discovered two of them were dead and the other was nearly so, but it is thought that that one can be saved with careful attention. Hunger is what caused the death of these. They had eaten the man's and tails off of each other and marks on the floor showed where they had been gnawing. It is a hard blow to Mr. Amos as the animals were very valuable, being only two and five years old.

Announcement

I have established a feed mill in Binford and am prepared to grind your feed on short notice.

The mill is located at my residence, and I respectfully solicit any grinding you want done.
