

T. G. Blewitt, conductor on the freight, was stricken suddenly ill last Wednesday, while the freight was going south, and as soon as the train reached Sanborn, he was hurried to the hospital at Brainard for treatment. It was found on examination that complications from an operation which he had a year ago for appendicitis had set in, and for a few days his condition was such that his life was despaired of. Recent reports are that he withstood the operation successfully and that he is out of danger. Tom is popular and has many warm friends on the branch who will be pleased to see him back on the job again.
