

on Tuesday.

Mrs. W. D. Ehlers informed The Times Tuesday of a piece of luck that had befallen her. A rich aunt by the name of Miss Sarah Anderson had died in England and left Mrs. Ehlers $35,000. We were a little skeptical about believing this, but she says it's straight and that we could make a news item of it if we cared to. The Times scribe doesn't want to question Mrs. Ehler's veracity but it's really too good to be true and that's what she says. To further substantiate her claim, she says she is looking for a good farm to buy, and that she will take things easy from now on.
