

The Times is in receipt of a letter from Clint Wilson, in which he advises us to change the address of his paper to Rangeview instead of Kelvinhurst. The weather there has been ideal, and has permitted them to sleep out of doors, when they are compelled to be away from home nights, when making drives to and from town. They have a postoffice now within two miles from the claim and in another year the railroad will be through that section as the grades are already completed. He sends greetings to all his friends.
