Binford is responding loyally again to the call for a company fund for our boys in the 352nd regiment at Camp Dodge.

Yesterday afternoon, just before this page was put on the press, F. G. Lewis approached a few people on the streets for contributions to this fund, and returned to this office with the list printed above. Not more than half an hour was spent in securing this amount—and Mr. Lewis is still on the job. He is determined that not only will we do our "bit," but that we will do our share, and it is hoped that other parts of the county will do likewise.

This money goes to make up a company fund to supply the boys of the 352nd with certain articles about the barracks which are not furnished by the government which make him more comfortable, such as magazines, papers, phonographs, checkers, baseball and football outfits and all sorts of things which give the men clean manly amusement.
