

Ed Feibigger was in from his farm northeast of town Monday, to consult Dr. Truscott. Mr. Feibigger had been shocking corn during the day and in stooping over to pick up some stalks, a small spear of grass entered his left nostril, causing a heavy flow of blood. He succeeded in stopping the flow by filling the nostril with cotton until he could get the assistance of the doctor.

U. S. Treasurer John Burke, who